

James Lind Alliance Priority Setting Partnership - Results:

The Top 10+ priorities for research around ME / CFS have been identified by the Partnership. These priorities have been determined as a result of two surveys and workshops engaging with people living with Myalgic Encephalomyelitis, their families and carers, and health professionals working to support these people.

“Now that we have the Top 10+, researchers, funders and government must work with people with ME/CFS to produce the highest quality research into these areas, and continue to prioritise ME”

Gemma Hoyes, PSP steering group member

The report is supported by The Rt Hon., Sajid Javid, MP, Secretary of State for Health and Social Care:

“I welcome the publication of this Priority Setting Partnership which sets out the Top 10+ research priorities for ME/CFS. The Government recognises that myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME) is an under-researched area and pledges to support research funders and the academic community to respond to this independent report.”

The list of priority research areas, as well as downloadable and audio versions of the project report can be found at Prioritise ME - ME/CFS Priority Setting Partnership \(psp-me.co.uk\). A small number of paper copies are available. If you would like a paper copy contact Helen, hbaxter@25megroup.org or 07392403591

Thank you to all members and their families who took part, we know how much of your energy it would have taken.
